BT Kingsley is an up and coming LA comedian finally looking for a meaningful relationship with the right woman in a city whose streets are infamously paved with the good intentions of those whose champagne dreams didn't quite materialize into reality or the desired outcome. That being said, even after several years of trial and error... and more than his share of frolicking misadventures along the way, BT is still no quitter.

Director of "She Wins"
Tony Spires

Tony Phruishun Spires is a veteran filmmaker, television producer, singer/songwriter/recording artist, poet/spoken word artist, a long-time theater artist and teaching artist.

Tony's feature films include: The romantic comedy, She Wins, the teen thriller, A Hot Night In The Valley, The Pan African Film Festival's Best Feature Film nominated Tears Of A Clown, and the gritty, urban crime drama Two Degrees. His short films include: Joke Thief, The Three-Legged Crow and Marvin Road. He directed the 12-episode romantic web series, Pillow Talk and was the pioneering director of the experimental new media film, Necessary Drama, one of the first live-streamed movies ever filmed and screened simultaneously.

(RT - 30 MIN)

Huey, the short film looks at the final days of Dr. Huey P. Newton's life to try and look at the plausible possibility, "Was Huey P. Newton randomly murdered or was it an orchestrated assassination by the United States government?" By taking public information from government agencies and private sources such as news agencies and media outlets and publications who have interviewed key players as well as Dr. Newton's loved ones and personal friends, this film revisits the days and month leading up to the fateful day he was murdered and the circumstances surrounding his death/execution.
